Born in Quito, Ecuador, Andrew Miguel Fuller now lives and works in Oakland, CA, where he is represented by Mercury 20 Gallery. Raised over both North and South America, his sculptural work reflects the dreamlike experience of the outsider in his own country. His artwork often poses questions of the psychological distance between the human animal and the larger planet on which we live. He holds a degree in the study of Society and Environment, and is passionately interested in questions of how the built environment and natural world work together to influence and shape the psychological welfare of the people in them.
